| Q10. | Where copies of identification documentation are provided, what are the requirements around independent verification or authentication?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| A10. | Copies of identification documents may be certified by a state authority, a notary public or a lawyer. Copies may also be certified by an authorised employee of a financial institution upon presentation of the originals. In specific for the obligated persons under the supervision of the Hellenic Capital Market Commission ("HCMC") it has been recently decided that the certification documents of their clients which have been categorised as high risk and having a capital for investment exceeding the amount of EUR75,000 should be authenticated by a public authority, or an EU bank, or other bank of a country applying the FATF recommendations (art 2. para.10 of HCMC Decision 1/506/8.4.2009).                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |

* GDP at purchaser's prices is the sum of gross value added by all resident producers in the economy plus any product taxes and minus any subsidies not included in the value of the products. It is calculated without making deductions for depreciation of fabricated assets or for depletion and degradation of natural resources. Data are in current U.S. dollars. Dollar figures for GDP are converted from domestic currencies using single year official exchange rates. For a few countries where the official exchange rate does not reflect the rate effectively applied to actual foreign exchange transactions, an alternative conversion factor is used.

| A23. | According to a Bank of Greece Governor's Act, Credit Institutions (and to some extent Financial Institutions) have the obligation to install adequate IT systems and effective procedures for continuously monitoring accounts and transactions, in order to detect, monitor and assess high-risk transactions and customers. IT systems should be capable of providing timely, reliable and necessary information for detecting, analysing and effectively monitoring customers' accounts and transactions. Accounts and transactions should be monitored in relation to the typology of transactions, the customer's profile, and the anticipated operation of the account in relation to the operation of other accounts in the same customer category. IT systems should be used for obtaining information on defective customer identification, the customer's profile and overall data on the Credit Institution's business relationship with the customer.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |

| Q24. | Is there a requirement to obtain authority to proceed with a current/ongoing transaction that is identified as suspicious?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| A24. | The obligated persons must refrain from carrying out transactions, engaging in activities or providing any services, which they know or suspect to be related to money laundering and terrorist financing offences, unless refraining in such manner is impossible or likely to frustrate efforts to pursue the customers, the beneficial owners or the persons on behalf of whom the customers may be acting. In the latter case the obligated persons shall execute the aforementioned operations and simultaneously inform the Greek FIU. |

| A29. | Greece has established data protection laws. The main piece of legislation is Law 2472/1997 which has implemented in all material respects the EU Directive 95/46. The definition of “personal data” in the data protection law covers material likely to be held for KYC purposes. Greek data protection law applies only to individuals and not to corporate data. There is a separate definition of “sensitive data” (art. 7 of law 2472/1997) which is in accordance with the definition/additional protections as set out by EU Directive 95/46 (article 8).                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |

| A30. | Yes. However the Greek AML law permits the exchange of information between credit or financial institutions situated in Greece or in another Member State and belonging to the same group. This also applies to the exchange of information between credit or financial institutions situated in Greece and similar institutions of the same group which are situated in a third country that imposes requirements at least equivalent to those laid down in the Greek AML law and which are subject to supervision of their compliance with those requirements.In addition, obligated persons (credit & financial institutions, audit firms, tax consultancy firms, notaries and lawyers) who are situated or conduct their business in Greece may exchange information with persons from the same professional category regarding the same customer and the same transactions or activities involving two or more of the above persons. The foregoing shall also apply to the exchange of information between resident obliged persons and natural or legal persons from the same professional category situated or conducting their business in another Member State or in a third country that imposes requirements at least equivalent to those laid down in the Greek AML law, provided that such persons are from the same professional category and are subject to at least equivalent obligations as regards professional secrecy and personal data protection. The information exchanged is used exclusively for the prevention and suppression of the offences of money laundering and terrorist financing. |

| Q32. | Does this jurisdiction have bank secrecy laws or other obligations of confidentiality (other than those that may have been accepted expressly under contract e.g. in account opening documentation)? If so, what data is subject to regulation?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| A32. | There are various secrecy/confidentiality laws. In relation to banks the most important piece of legislation is L.D 1059/1971, pursuant to the disclosure of information relating to the existence, nature and balance of bank deposits is prohibited. This special banking secrecy rule applies to all banks operating in Greece and their officers, directors, employees and agents. In accordance, however, with the applicable legislation on lifting banking and professional secrecy, a Registry of Bank & Payment Accounts electronic System has been set up by virtue of articles 62-63 of L. 4170/2013 and Min. Circular POL 1258/5.12.2013 as in force, through which certain Greek authorities (i.e. the Secretary General for Public Revenues, the Economic Crimes Enforcement Agency, the Economic Police, the Economic District Attorney, the District Attorney for Corruption Crimes and the Greek FIU) have, under specific procedures, the ability to request from credit and payment institutions to provide them with data and information of clients maintained by such institutions (e.g. details of accounts, balances, transactions effected). |

| A1. | The Criminal Justice (Proceeds of Crime) (Bailiwick of Guernsey) Law was issued in 1999. It is supplemented by the Criminal Justice (Proceeds of Crime) (Financial Services Businesses) (Bailiwick of Guernsey) Regulations 2007 ("the Regulations") and the Handbook for Financial Services Businesses on Countering Financial Crime and Terrorist Financing 2012 ("the Handbook"). |
| Q2. | If the AML laws and/or regulations became effective in the last 2 years, what were the requirements of the previous AML regime?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| A2. | AML legislation requiring customer due diligence procedures was introduced in 2002. The 2007 Regulations and Handbook represent an update to the 2002 requirements.                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Q3. | Who is the regulator for AML controls for: (a) Banking; (b) Other financial Services; (c) Non financial sector (e.g. casinos, high value goods etc.). Please include link to the regulator(s) website.                                                                                                                                                                               |
| A3. | For a), b) and c) the regulator is Guernsey Financial Services Commission: www.gfsc.gg                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Q4. | Is there any practical guidance provided to firms by public authorities regarding AML requirements, beyond the FATF recommendations and local legislation? Please include link to website, where available.                                                                                                                                                                          |
| A4. | Yes, the Handbook has specific guidance for financial services businesses on the application of AML requirements.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Q5. | Is there a requirement to retrospectively verify the identity of customers before the date the new AML regime was introduced?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| A5. | By 31 March 2010, financial services businesses were required to have taken any necessary actions to remedy any identified deficiencies and satisfy itself that CDD information appropriate to the assessed risk is held in respect of existing customers.                                                                                                                           |

| A6. | Yes, the Regulations and Handbook became effective on 15 Dec 2007 for regulated financial services businesses. The regulations were extended in Sep 2008 and Oct 2010 to cover certain services offered by lawyers, accountants and estate agents. The Handbook is not intended to provide an exhaustive list of appropriate and effective policies, procedures and controls to counter money laundering and the financing of terrorism. The structure of the Handbook is such that it permits a financial services business to adopt a risk-based approach appropriate to its particular circumstances. The financial services business should give consideration to additional measures that may be necessary to prevent its exploitation and that of its services/products and delivery channels by persons seeking to carry out money laundering or terrorist financing. A financial services business should be able to take a risk-based approach with regard to being used for the purposes of money laundering and terrorist financing; ensure its policies; procedures and controls are appropriately designed and implemented; and are effectively operated to reduce the risk of the financial services business being used in connection with money laundering or terrorist financing. |
| Q7. | Has the country been the subject of a FATF (or FATF-style) Mutual Evaluation or IMF assessment exercise in the last three years? If yes, please find a link to a relevant report (if publicly available).                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |

| A10. | Where non face-to-face identification and verification is carried out, a certified copy of the identification documentation is required. For certification to be effective, the certifier will need to have seen the original documentation and, where certifying evidence of identity containing a photograph, have met the individual in person. Where certified copy documents are accepted, the financial services business must satisfy itself, where possible, that the certifier is appropriate, for example, by satisfying itself that the certifier is not closely related to the person whose identity is being certified. A suitable certifier must certify that he has seen original documentation verifying identity. The certifier must also sign and date the copy identification data and provide adequate information so that contact can be made with the certifier in the event of a query. A consultation paper was published in May 2015 that seeks feedback on a proposal to make changes to the Handbook in order to recognise that technology is changing traditional methods of undertaking due diligence. |

| Q32. | Does this jurisdiction have bank secrecy laws or other obligations of confidentiality (other than those that may have been accepted expressly under contract e.g. in account opening documentation)? If so, what data is subject to regulation?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| A32. | Guernsey meets or exceeds all OECD, EU and UK standards on tax transparency and information exchange, including commitment to apply the Automatic Exchange of Information (“AEOI”) agreements. It has no banking secrecy laws and has automatically exchanged information under the EU Savings Tax Directive. Guernsey is a tax transparent, co-operative jurisdiction with an economic model that complements and enhances UK Plc tax competitiveness. Guernsey should be considered neither a “tax haven” nor a “secrecy jurisdiction”. |

| A11. | How to identify: Identify any beneficial owner connected with the customer or service concerned. This information can be provided by the customer (or on the customer's behalf by the customer's duly authorised representative) or obtained from a reliable, independent source. This should include designated persons taking reasonable measures to understand the ownership and control structure of the customer. This would comprise: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) any natural person who owns or controls more than 25% of the shares or voting rights in the legal person or arrangement; or</li> <li>b) any natural person who exerts ultimate control over the legal person through its management or otherwise.</li> </ul> If, exceptionally, due to the nature or structure of the legal person or arrangement, it is not feasible to identify any natural person who meets either of the definitions at a) or b) above, the designated person may treat as exercising control the directors (or equivalent) or other persons having the power to legally bind the customer. The designated person must record the basis for their decision in reaching the conclusions it has in relation to the ownership / control of the customer. How to verify: Verify the identity of the natural persons who own or control more than 25% of the shares or voting rights or otherwise exercises control over the management of the legal person or arrangement. The extent of this verification is dependent on the relevant risks. This would be satisfied by verifying identity in line with the requirements for individuals. This could also be satisfied by one or more of the following alternative approaches in line with the risk policy of the designated person. In high risk scenarios a designated person should use more than one source to verify information. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) obtaining a copy of the annual audited accounts listing shareholders, directors or other persons exercising control over the customer (where the information is considered by the designated person to be current and reliable);</li> <li>b) for complex structures, (particularly where a company is registered abroad) a relevant and up-to-date legal opinion from a source on which the designated person is prepared to rely, documenting due diligence conducted, including in relation to information on the shareholding / control structure and directors (or equivalent);</li> <li>c) placing reliance on information provided / certified by counterparties / agents (e.g. in syndicated deals) where such persons are regulated credit or financial institutions or are legal or accountancy professionals subject to equivalent AML/CTF obligations;</li> <li>d) having a notary public (or equivalent) certify the validity of the information provided by or on behalf of the customer; or</li> <li>e) placing reliance on information provided / certified by a Company Secretary (or equivalent), e.g., copies of constitutional documentation (e.g., Memo &amp; Articles/Certificates of Incorporation / Trust Deed) and shareholder certification.</li> </ul> In line with the designated person's risk assessment the process may include verifying a beneficial owner's personal identity (the extent of verification required will depend on the risk) in line with the requirements for personal customers. Such verification should be considered the norm for any customer regarded by the designated person as higher risk. |

| A30. | Before personal information can be transferred outside the Island an organisation must ensure that adequate protection exists for the information in the receiving country. Countries within the European Economic Area, that is, European Union member states plus Norway, Iceland and Liechtenstein are deemed to have adequate protection. In addition, the European Commission has made adequacy findings for other countries, including Argentina, Guernsey, Jersey, Switzerland and Canada, and US companies that have "signed up" to the Safe Harbour provisions. On the 28 Apr 2004, the European Commission formally decided that the Isle of Man has adequate data protection legislation. |

| A6. | The Italian system provides strict and detailed provisions on anti-money laundering and terrorist financing requirements. In general, it is possible to assign these obligations on the basis of risk (the risk based approach became effective in Dec 2007). Furthermore, KYC rules issued by the Bank of Italy provide more details on the application of a risk-based approach.                                                                                                                                                                            |

| Q18. | To whom are Suspicious Activity Reports (SARs) made? Please include a link to their website.                                                                                                                                                                         |
| A18. | SARs must be reported to the Financial Intelligence Unit (i.e. Unità d'Informazione Finanziaria - UIF), which is a special agency of the Banking Supervisory Authority (Banca d'Italia): http://www.bancaditalia.it/UIF |
| Q19. | What was the volume of SARs made to the authorities in the most recent year? Please state the GDP for the equivalent year.                                                                                                                                           |
| A19. | Volume of SARs:2014 – 71,758 SARs GDP (in current prices):2014 - USD2,141,000m (Source: data.worldbank.org*) This results in a ratio of 1 SAR for every USD29.9m of GDP.                      |
| Q20. | Are there any obligations to report anything more than suspicious transactions e.g. unusual transactions, cash transactions above a certain threshold, international wire transfers, other transactions etc.?                                                        |
| A20. | There is an obligation to report all financial transactions above EUR3,000 made by credit card or e-payment, but this is not specifically for AML purposes. This type of report is made to the tax agency (Agenzia delle Entrate).                                   |
| Q21. | Are there any de-minimis thresholds below which transactions do not need to be reported?                                                                                                                                                                             |
| A21. | See answer to A20 above.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Q22. | Are there any penalties for non compliance with reporting requirements e.g. tipping off?                                                                                                                                                                             |
| A22. | Yes. There is a penal sanction for tipping off.                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Q23. | Are there any requirements (legal or regulatory) to use automated Suspicious Transaction monitoring technology?                                                                                                                                                      |
| A23. | Even if there is not a strict requirement to use automated suspicious transaction monitoring technology, there is the possibility to use an automated monitoring tool in order to support suspicious transaction reporting.                                          |

* GDP at purchaser's prices is the sum of gross value added by all resident producers in the economy plus any product taxes and minus any subsidies not included in the value of the products. It is calculated without making deductions for depreciation of fabricated assets or for depletion and degradation of natural resources. Data are in current U.S. dollars. Dollar figures for GDP are converted from domestic currencies using single year official exchange rates. For a few countries where the official exchange rate does not reflect the rate effectively applied to actual foreign exchange transactions, an alternative conversion factor is used.

| A9.  | Individuals: Legal name, any former names (such as maiden name) and any other names used; principal residential address and date of birth are required for all customers. In the case of standard risk customers additional details include: place of birth, nationality and sex should be obtained. Higher risk customers also require Government issued personal identification number (or equivalent). No specific documents are mandatory, but local issued guidance dictates that evidence of identity should be obtained from documents issued by reputable sources. Identity verification: Current passport (providing photographic evidence of identity), current national identity card (providing photographic evidence of identity), current driving licence (providing photographic evidence of identity) where the licensing authority carries out a check on the holder's identity before issuing or independent data sources. Address verification: Correspondence from a central or local government department, letter from regulated entity, personal visit to residential address, a bank statement, tenancy contract or utility bill. Legal entities: Name of company, any trading names, date and country of incorporation/registration, official identification number, registered office address, mailing address (if different), principal place of business/operations, names of all directors, identification information of all directors who have and exercise authority to operate a relationship or to give the relevant person instructions concerning the use or transfer of funds or assets and identification information of individuals ultimately holding a 25% or more interest in the capital of the company. Verification of identity of the company can be demonstrated where the name of the company, date and country of incorporation/registration and official identification number are verified. In the case of standard and higher risk customers, the registered office address and principal place of operations should also be verified. Components of identity can be verified using one or more (in the case of standard and higher risk customers) verification methods: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>original or certified copy of the certificate of incorporation;</li> <li>memorandum and Articles of Association;</li> <li>company registry search;</li> <li>latest audited financial statements;</li> <li>independent data sources, including electronic sources; and</li> <li>personal visit to principle place of business.</li> </ol> In circumstances where information is not already publicly available/held, minimum requirements are to verify the identity of directors or similar persons who have authority to operate a relationship or give instructions concerning the use/transfer of assets. Verification of other directors and beneficial owners should also be considered depending on the risk profile. The AML Handbook also provides guidance on Trusts, Foundations, Partnerships and Employee Pension Schemes. |

| A11. | A new three-tiered approach for identifying beneficial owners and controllers was introduced on 01 Jan 2015. This requires identification of individuals having a material controlling ownership interest, if none, individuals exercising control through other means should be identified and, again if none, individuals exercising executive control through senior management positions should be identified. These need to be identified and verified in line with the requirements for individuals detailed in A9. Material interest is deemed to be those holding 25% or more interest in the capital of the entity. Enhanced CDD measures must be applied on a risk-sensitive basis where an owner or controller of a customer or other person that must be identified under Article 3 of the Money Laundering Order is not physically present for identification purposes. For low risk customers, relevant identification information on the beneficial owners and controllers must be collected and reasonable measures must be taken to verify the identity of any beneficial owners and controllers of the applicant. |

|      |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
|------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Q20. | Are there any obligations to report anything more than suspicious transactions e.g. unusual transactions, cash transactions above a certain threshold, international wire transfers, other transactions etc.?                      |
| A20. | Whilst there is no specific legal requirement, there is guidance for specific industries (for example, high value goods dealers) on unusual transactions, cash transactions, wire transfers etc. This is part of the AML Handbook. |

|      |                                                                                          |
|------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Q21. | Are there any de-minimis thresholds below which transactions do not need to be reported? |
| A21. | No.                                                                                      |

|      |                                                                                          |
|------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Q22. | Are there any penalties for non compliance with reporting requirements e.g. tipping off? |
| A22. | Yes, there are penalties for "Failure to report", "Assisting" and "Tipping Off".         |

|      |                                                                                                                 |
|------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Q23. | Are there any requirements (legal or regulatory) to use automated Suspicious Transaction monitoring technology? |
| A23. | No, but section 5.3 of the AML Handbook provides guidance on the use of automated monitoring.                   |

|      |                                                                                                                            |
|------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Q24. | Is there a requirement to obtain authority to proceed with a current/ongoing transaction that is identified as suspicious? |
| A24. | Yes, authorisation is required to proceed if transactions are identified as suspicious.                                    |

|      |                                                                                         |
|------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| A25. | Not currently.                                                                          |

| A32. | Jersey meets or exceeds all OECD (the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development), EU and UK standards on tax transparency and information exchange, including commitment to apply the AEOI (Automatic Exchange of Information) agreements. It has no banking secrecy laws and has automatically exchanged information under the EU Savings Tax Directive. Jersey is a tax transparent, co-operative jurisdiction with an economic model that complements and enhances UK Plc tax competitiveness. Jersey should be considered neither a “tax haven” nor a “secrecy jurisdiction”. |

* GDP at purchaser's prices is the sum of gross value added by all resident producers in the economy plus any product taxes and minus any subsidies not included in the value of the products. It is calculated without making deductions for depreciation of fabricated assets or for depletion and degradation of natural resources. Data are in current U.S. dollars. Dollar figures for GDP are converted from domestic currencies using single year official exchange rates. For a few countries where the official exchange rate does not reflect the rate effectively applied to actual foreign exchange transactions, an alternative conversion factor is used.

| A6. | Yes. CSSF Regulation 12-02 stresses that all AML/CTF measures taken have to be properly aligned to the assessed risk. The risk based approach methodology set forth in the Regulation comprises a risk assessment based on various criteria such as client risk, country risk, risk associated with products, transactions or the distribution/selling of the product. For the investment fund industry, the latter risk variable will be of particular relevance. With regards to the written AML/CTF risk assessment of the professionals' own activity, an obligation as required by the Law of 12 Nov 2004, as amended, and Article 5 of the Regulation specifies that: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) the risk assessment of each new client and for each new product needs to be done prior to client acceptance/product launch;</li> <li>b) the risk score of each client must be kept up to date; and</li> <li>c) the professional must be in a position to communicate its risk assessment to the CSSF.</li> </ul> |

| A9.  | Individuals: Pursuant to Article 18 of the Regulation 12-02, the identity of a customer must be verified by means of a valid official document issued by a competent authority and bearing a photo and signature. In addition to passports and identity cards, other official documents such as residential permits can be accepted. Article 24 of the Regulation now clearly states that when establishing the client relationship, the information on the origin of funds must be part of this initial customer due diligence. Corporates: Articles of Association (or equivalent), extract of the Commercial Register (or equivalent), business authorisation if the entity manages funds of third parties, identification of the beneficial owners and of the persons with authorised signatures.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |

| A11. | Beneficial owners must be identified and their identification needs to be verified in line with the requirements applicable to a natural person. Article 23 of the Regulation 12-02 confirms that a beneficial owner can, notwithstanding the 25% of ownership threshold, be a person who owns or controls less than 25% of a legal structure but who is nevertheless the person who ultimately controls the legal structure. According to Article 17 of the Regulation 12-02, the professionals are required to obtain a declaration of beneficial ownership signed by their clients. The beneficial owner is no longer required to sign such a declaration himself, but the client must inform the professional in case of any change in beneficial ownership.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |

| A24. | Professionals must refrain from carrying out a transaction which they know or suspect to be related to money laundering or terrorist financing before having informed the FIU. The FIU can give instructions not to execute one or more operations relating to the transaction or the customer. Where a transaction is suspected of giving rise to money laundering or terrorist financing and where to refrain in such manner is impossible or is likely to frustrate efforts to pursue the beneficiaries of a suspected money laundering or terrorist financing operation, the professionals concerned shall submit the necessary information immediately afterwards. |

* GDP at purchaser's prices is the sum of gross value added by all resident producers in the economy plus any product taxes and minus any subsidies not included in the value of the products. It is calculated without making deductions for depreciation of fabricated assets or for depletion and degradation of natural resources. Data are in current U.S. dollars. Dollar figures for GDP are converted from domestic currencies using single year official exchange rates. For a few countries where the official exchange rate does not reflect the rate effectively applied to actual foreign exchange transactions, an alternative conversion factor is used.

| Q29. | Does the country have established data protection laws? If so:a) does the definition of "personal data" cover material likely to be held for KYC purposes?b) how do the laws apply to corporate data?c) does this country have a separate definition of "sensitive data"? How is it defined and what are the additional protections?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| A29. | Yes, the Law of 02 Aug 2002 on the protection of personal data transposes the EU Directive 95/46/CE:a) to the extent that KYC material includes information about individuals this falls within the definition of "personal data";b) the Law does not cover corporate data but only personal data. Corporate entities related data are not in the scope of the Law; andc) no. The Law adopts the EU directive definition for data of a sensitive nature. In some cases, the processing of such data is prohibited; in other cases it requires an approval from the local Data Protection Authority. |
| Q30. | Are there any prohibitions on the transfer of credit reports (for KYC and credit risk analysis purposes), criminal records (for KYC and crime prevention purposes) and medical data (for KYC and pension benefits purposes)?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| A30. | No, such processing is not prohibited but requires consent and to pass the "loyalty", "legitimacy", "proportionate", etc. usual tests. Criminal record data cannot be processed except when so authorised by law. Medical data might be processed for life insurance purposes, subject to compliance with the legal requirements (consent, etc.).                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Q31. | Is there case law, other constitutional law or any other laws or regulations that may impact upon the transfer of information to this jurisdiction?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |

| A32. | Yes, there is a bank secrecy imposed by law to financial institutions and other financial players. Any breach is subject to criminal sanctions. This covers all client related data without any limit of time. Client's consent does not waive the professional secrecy duty.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |

| A5. | The PMLFTR require subject persons to apply customer due diligence ("CDD") measures to existing customers at appropriate times on a risk sensitive basis and when the subject person becomes aware that changes have occurred in the circumstances surrounding the established business relationship. The PMLFTR do not impose an obligation on subject persons to update all CDD documentation of all existing customers prior to 31 Jul 2008 when the PMLFTR came into force. However, since the PMLFTR require subject persons to update documentation of existing clients at appropriate times on a risk sensitive basis, subject persons are required to update the documentation of customers posing a higher risk, determined on the basis of the subject persons procedures for risk assessment and risk management, as soon as reasonably practicable. With respect to other customers, subject persons should update CDD documentation when certain trigger events occur, such as when an existing customer applies to open a new bank account or to establish a new relationship, or where an existing relationship changes. |

| A30. | In general, the data subject should be required to give his/her consent to the disclosure of personal data by the Controller to third parties. In addition, in terms of the DPA the '...transfer to a third country of personal data that is undergoing processing or intended processing, may only take place subject to the provisions of this Act and provided that the third country to which the data is transferred ensures an adequate level of protection.' Furthermore, the DPA expressly provides that 'it is for the Commissioner to decide whether a third country ensures an adequate level of protection. The transfer of personal data to a third country that does not ensure adequate protection is prohibited.' The website maintained by the Office of the Information and Data Protection Commissioner explains that a transfer of personal data to another country constitutes processing and as such must be notified to the Commissioner in the same way as other processing operations. However, no restrictions or other formalities apply in relation to the transfer of personal data to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) EU Member States;</li> <li>b) member countries of the EEA; and</li> <li>c) third countries (i.e. countries that are not Member States of the European Union) which are from time to time recognised by the EU Commission to have an adequate level of protection.</li> </ul> In the case of entities licenced under the Banking Act, institutions part of a global network, can share data with other members of the group without customer's explicit consent, provided the sharing is necessary for the proper carrying out of their activities. The Professional Secrecy Act also prohibits the sharing of customer information with third parties unless customer consent is held. This act does not distinguish between personal and corporate customers. In cases of investigations carried out MLROs, sharing of data relating to the transaction/s being under scrutiny can be shared in very limited circumstances with other MLROs depending on the type of licenced activity carried out. |

| A32. | Yes. Article 257 of the Criminal Code (Chapter 9 of the Laws of Malta) ("CC") provides that the disclosure of secret information by any person, who by reason of his calling, profession or office, becomes the depositary of any secret confided in him, is an offence. This should not apply if such person would have been compelled by law to disclose such information.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |

| A31. | There are no specific restrictions on the transfer of personal data to the Netherlands. Transfer of data within the European Union:The Wbp does not have any individual provisions governing data movements within the European Union ("EU"), as the Wbp implements the European Directive for the Dutch jurisdiction. Data movement from the Netherlands to another EU Member State thus only has to conform to the general requirements of the Wbp. Transfer to countries outside the European Union:The Wbp has specific provisions for the movement of data to countries outside the European Union, the third countries (Chapter 11 Wbp). Third countries are all countries outside the European Union, with the exception of the countries of the European Economic Area ("EEA"). The countries of the EEA (Norway, Liechtenstein and Iceland) have undertaken to implement the directive in their own legislation. Appropriate level of protection:The primary rule is that personal data may only be transferred to a third country if the general requirements of the Wbp have been conformed to and the third country ensures an adequate level of protection. For a number of countries, the European Commission has adopted decisions regarding the adequacy of the level of protection. No adequate level of protection:If a third country does not provide an adequate level of protection, there are two possibilities for still being entitled to transfer data to these third countries: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) Transfer based on the exceptions mentioned in the Act (Art 77(1) Wbp); or</li> <li>b) Transfer based on a permit issued from the Minister of Justice. | A11. | The Money Laundering Act ("MLA") requires financial institutions (and many others) to verify the identity of beneficial owners on the basis of reasonable measures. The MLA defines 'beneficial owners' generally as the 'natural persons who ultimately own or control the customer and/or on whose behalf a transaction or activity is being carried out'. The definition is then further elaborated to describe five situations where a person 'in all cases' is to be regarded as a beneficial owner.                                         |

| A22. | Yes, breaches of the Money Laundering Act can be punished with fines or imprisonment for up to one year when special aggravating circumstances exist. |

* GDP at purchaser's prices is the sum of gross value added by all resident producers in the economy plus any product taxes and minus any subsidies not included in the value of the products. It is calculated without making deductions for depreciation of fabricated assets or for depletion and degradation of natural resources. Data are in current U.S. dollars. Dollar figures for GDP are converted from domestic currencies using single year official exchange rates. For a few countries where the official exchange rate does not reflect the rate effectively applied to actual foreign exchange transactions, an alternative conversion factor is used.

| Q23. | Are there any requirements (legal or regulatory) to use automated Suspicious Transaction monitoring technology?                                   |
| A23. | Yes, financial institutions have an obligation according to the Money Laundering Act to use electronic suspicious transaction monitoring systems. |

|      |                                                                                                                                                                                           |
|------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Q24. | Is there a requirement to obtain authority to proceed with a current/ongoing transaction that is identified as suspicious?                                                                |
| A24. | Yes, as the principal rule, suspicious transactions shall not proceed before a report is made to the FIU (ØKOKRIM). ØKOKRIM can decide that the actual transaction shall not be effected. |

|      |                                                                                         |
|------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|

| A11. | Local guidance requires verification of the identity of appropriate beneficial owners holding 25% or more. Where a principal owner is another corporate entity or trust, the firm should take measures to establish the identities of its beneficial owners or trustees, unless that company is publicly traded. The entity will then judge which of the beneficial owners exercise effective control, and whose identities should therefore be verified.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |

| Q25. | Does the local legislation allow transactions to be monitored outside the jurisdiction?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| A25. | The Act provides that as a rule it is the Polish General Inspector of the Financial Information that is officially authorised to monitor the transactions. However, bearing in mind that the Act implements the EU regulations (that should have been implemented by all Member States), it is likely that a transaction may be subject to monitoring outside Poland, on the basis stipulated by the local law of the foreign party of the transaction, especially in cases where a given transaction is performed with or via a foreign entity. |

| A29. | Yes, Poland has established personal data protection laws.a) yes;b) although corporate data is not considered as personal data, the processing of natural persons data (such as the representatives of a company) is subject to personal data protection law; andc) Polish data protection law provides a catalogue of "sensitive personal data". They include data on: racial or ethnic origin, political opinions, religious or philosophic beliefs, religion, party or trade-union membership, data concerning health, genetic code, addictions, sexual life, data relating to convictions, decisions on penalty, fines and other decisions issued in any court or administrative proceedings. The processing of such data, as a general rule, is prohibited, unless one of the requirements permitting such processing is provided (e.g. the data subject provides written consent in that respect, such data processing is necessary to protect the data subjects interests, specific provisions of law enable such data processing etc.). Additional protections that apply to the processing of sensitive personal data include: prohibition of processing sensitive personal data before a data filing system is registered in the Polish Data Protection authority's register, an obligation to apply medium security level for protecting the data processed within IT systems without connection to the internet and high security level for protecting the data processed within IT systems connected to the internet. |

| A32. | Yes. The relevant law is contained in the Polish Banking Law, Act on Financial Instruments of Trading, National Bank of Poland Act, Act on Insurance Activity and the Act on Payment Services. The Polish Banking Law applies in the case of banks, their employees and anyone through whom the bank undertakes banking acts. They are bound by banking secrecy, which is applicable to all information regarding a banking act, whether obtained in the course of negotiations, or during the conclusion or performance of an agreement on the basis of which the bank undertakes the act. Some financial institutions and their employees are also obliged to keep their professional secrecy and there are specific regulations as to when data sharing may take place. Usually, this may happen upon written consent of their client. In addition, certain information of technical, technological, commercial or organisational character regarding the entrepreneur is covered by law concerning trade secrecy and cannot be revealed to third parties, if it was not disclosed to the public and the trade partner was directly advised by the client not to disclose such information. |

| A29. | Yes, Romania's personal data protection legislation exists mainly in Law no. 677/2001 on the protection of individuals with regard to the processing of personal data and the free movement of such data. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>yes;</li> <li>they only apply in relation to the personal data of individuals; and</li> <li>yes, it refers to "special categories of data", and it includes personal data regarding ethnic or racial origin, political, religious or philosophical beliefs or those of a similar nature, trade-union allegiance, as well as personal data regarding the state of health or sex life, personal data regarding criminal or minor offences, as well as personal identification numbers or of other personal data with a general identification function. Additional protection depends on the category of data. In general, the additional protection consists of the requirement to process such data based exclusively on the express and unequivocal consent of the person. However, the processing of data regarding ethnic or racial origin, political, religious or philosophical beliefs or those of similar nature, trade-union allegiance, as well as personal data regarding the state of health or sex life is prohibited or it is very strictly regulated. Processing personal data regarding criminal offences committed by the data subject, or regarding previous criminal convictions, security measures or administrative or minor offence sanctions applied to the data subject, may be carried out only under the control of public authorities, within the limits of their powers given by law and under the terms established by the specific provisions in this field of law.</li> </ol> |

| A30. | Yes. In general, transfer of data to another data controller means that a new process is made by a new data controller for its own purposes and that the authorisations obtained by the transferor to process any such special category of data may not automatically be transferred to the transferee along with the data. Therefore, such a transferee (data controller) must obtain all the necessary authorisations itself. However, if the transferee is merely a data processor working under the supervision of the data controller (transferor), then the data processor's activity should be deemed covered by the transferor's authorisation. However, should the data processor be located in a country outside of the EEA and which is not recognised as having a similar degree of protection of personal data, such transfer must be authorised by the Romanian Authorities. |

The scope of CDD is provided in Federal Law 115-FZ and Regulations of the Central Bank of Russia 262-P. AML regulated entities may define additional due diligence requirements in their internal AML policies.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Q14. | In what circumstances is additional due diligence required for Politically Exposed Persons (‘PEPs’)?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| A14. | Russian law recognises a PEP relationship only in respect of natural person clients and clients’ UBOs (however if UBO is a PEP, it triggers as a higher risk). Russian law distinguishes between Foreign and International Organisations’ PEPs (according to FATF) and Russian PEPs (closed list of Russian officials). Additional due diligence measures in respect of PEP relationships are as follows: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) natural person clients being PEPs are on-boarded only upon written approval of the head of the organisation or their delegate;</li> <li>b) inquiries into the Source of Wealth are required for PEP relationships; and</li> <li>c) reporting of transactions of Foreign and International Organisations’ PEPs is required.</li> </ul> |
| Q15. | What enhanced due diligence must be performed for correspondent banking relationships (cross-border banking and similar relationships)?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| A15. | Local regulations state that for the establishment of correspondent relationships, the institution shall request, in addition to standard identification information, documents and information about AML controls of the correspondent bank. The decision on the establishment of such relations shall be adopted with the consent of the head of the organisation or their delegate.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Q16. | Are relationships with shell banks specifically prohibited?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| A16. | Yes, AML regulated entities are prohibited to deal with shell banks or with banks that deal with shell banks.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |

| Q19. | What was the volume of SARs made to the authorities in the most recent year? Please state the GDP for the equivalent year.                                                                                                                                                                  |
| A19. | Information on the volume of SARs is not publicly available.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Q20. | Are there any obligations to report anything more than suspicious transactions e.g. unusual transactions, cash transactions above a certain threshold, international wire transfers, other transactions etc.?                                                                               |
| A20. | Reporting requirements are based on multiple criteria (including cash transactions above a certain amount, unusual transactions etc.). Reporting requirements are extremely detailed and onerous and are listed in Federal Law 115-FZ and Regulations of the Central Bank of Russia #375-P. |
| Q21. | Are there any de-minimis thresholds below which transactions do not need to be reported?                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| A21. | No such de-minimis thresholds for reporting.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Q22. | Are there any penalties for non compliance with reporting requirements e.g. tipping off?                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| A22. | Yes, penalties including revocation of license for non-compliance with reporting requirements can follow.                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Q23. | Are there any requirements (legal or regulatory) to use automated Suspicious Transaction monitoring technology?                                                                                                                                                                             |

| Q24. | Is there a requirement to obtain authority to proceed with a current/ongoing transaction that is identified as suspicious?                                                                                                                                                                  |
| A24. | No. However, financial institutions have the right to reject a transaction that is classified as suspicious and report this rejection to FSFM.                                                                                                                                              |

| Q29. | Does the country have established data protection laws? | A29. | Yes, Russia has established onerous personal data protection laws. Personal data has a very broad definition (including a person's name or any personal detail) and covers natural persons only (it does not cover company data unless it pertains to natural persons such as UBOs or Legal Representatives etc.). Thus the definition of "personal data" covers material likely to be held for KYC purposes. Consent is required for collecting, processing or transferring personal data. Data of both natural persons and legal entities is protected by banking secrecy regulations. |

| A9. | Individuals: Name, surname, birth identification number or date of birth, place of birth, gender, address and citizenship. These would normally be verified by an identity card or passport. Individuals who conduct business: In addition to the above, full name of the business, place of business and identification number needs to be noted. Legal entities: the full name, residency/seat, identification (or similar identification received from foreign offices) showing evidence of the company's existence (i.e. certificate of incorporation, trade register statement or other). The same principles for 'individuals' apply for the identification of individuals in the company's statutory body. If the company's statutory body or the owner is another legal entity, identification documentation must also be collected for that entity. The way of acting of the statutory representatives, acting on behalf of the legal entity must be proven, e.g. visible from the certificate of incorporation, trade register statement or other similar document, or power of attorney must be provided by the client. |

| Q29. | Does the country have established data protection laws? If so:a) does the definition of "personal data" cover material likely to be held for KYC purposes?b) how do the laws apply to corporate data?c) does this country have a separate definition of "sensitive data"? | A29. | Yes. Slovak Act No. 122/2013 Coll. ("the Data Protection Act") governs the area of personal data protection.a) yes;b) the personal data used for corporate purposes are subject to the Data Protection Act. Rules for acquiring, processing, storing, and usage (jointly "processing") of personal data must be complied with in full extent. However, for the purpose of AML, processing of personal data is generally not subject to the consent of affected persons, if their eventual submission to the FAU as a part of SAR is required directly by the law; andc) yes, the Data Protection Act stipulates a separately protected category of personal data. It is forbidden to process personal data on racial or ethnic origin, political opinions, religious or philosophical beliefs, membership in political parties or political movements, trade union membership and data concerning health or sex life. Personal data regarding mental identity, biometric personal data, and personal data on records of criminal and administrative offences may be processed only by persons designated by relevant laws, and only for specific purposes. |

| Q30. | Are there any prohibitions on the transfer of credit reports (for KYC and credit risk analysis purposes), criminal records (for KYC and crime prevention purposes) and medical data (for KYC and pension benefits purposes)? |
| A30. | No. However, with regard to medical data, they are not very likely to be the subject of a SAR to the FAU.                                                                                                                    |

| Q31. | Is there case law, other constitutional law or any other laws or regulations that may impact upon the transfer of information to this jurisdiction?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| A31. | In general, the AML data provided by the obliged subjects are exempt from any usual restrictions imposed on these types of data. However, each transfer would need to be considered carefully and provided strictly within the extent of the AML law and other applicable legislation, so that no rights or legal entities or natural persons are breached. Generally, transfers of personal data to countries without adequate protection measures (i.e. outside the EEA and EU and Safe Harbour Regime) require approval of the Slovak Personal Data Protection Office. Each case is considered separately. |

| Q32. | Does this jurisdiction have bank secrecy laws or other obligations of confidentiality (other than those that may have been accepted expressly under contract e.g. in account opening documentation)? If so, what data is subject to regulation?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| A32. | Yes, the general business secrecy is stipulated in the Act No. 513/1991 Coll., the Commercial Code as amended, and specific bank secrecy is stipulated in the Act No. 483/2001 Coll. on banks. Trade secrets are all facts with a commercial, production or technical nature, related to the business, which have actual or at least potential material or immaterial value, which are not available in the relevant business circles, should be classified according to the will of the entrepreneur, and the entrepreneur adequately ensures their confidentiality. Bank secrecy means keeping confidential all the information and documents on matters relating to the client of the bank that is not publicly accessible. In particular, information on transactions, account balances and deposit balances. The bank is obliged to keep this information confidential and protected from disclosure, misuse, damage, destruction, loss or theft. Information and documents on matters that are protected by bank secrecy cannot be disclosed to third parties without the prior written consent of the client. There are also other types of confidentiality prescribed by the relevant laws, such as attorney-client confidentiality, medical confidentiality, auditor confidentiality and others. |

| Q10. | Where copies of identification documentation are provided, what are the requirements around independent verification or authentication?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| A10. | Copies should be certified by an appropriate person, for example an employee of the commercial office.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Q11. | What are the high level requirements around beneficial ownership (identification and verification)?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| A11. | The law determines that firms may consider it appropriate to verify the identity of appropriate beneficial owners. Where a principal owner is another corporate entity or trust, the firm should take measures to look behind that company or trust and establish the identities of its beneficial owners or trustees. The firm will then judge which of the beneficial owners exercise effective control, and whose identities should therefore be verified.                                                                                                        |
| Q12. | In what circumstances are reduced/simplified due diligence arrangements available?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| A12. | Simplified due diligence could be applied to some concrete clients and products. Detailed requirements for this are detailed in Law 10/2010, Section 2, Articles 9 and 10.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |

| A1. | In 2009, the 2009:62 Money Laundering and Terrorist Financing (Prevention) Act became effective. This law is based on the Third Anti-Money Laundering Directive. The legislation has been upgraded with extended criminal provisions and a penalty catalogue (see further information below). The law is called the Act on penalties for money laundering offences (2014:307) and became effective 01 Jul 2014. In addition, legislation updates based on FATF 40 revised standards from 2012 have been implemented in the Money Laundering and Terrorist Financing (Prevention) Act and became effective 01 Aug 2015. Furthermore updates of the Swedish FSA's regulatory code will be implemented on 01 Dec 2015.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

| A24. | No. In certain situations, the Police Authority can issue a temporary order to block transactions and funds from being executed or removed.                                                                                                       |
| A25. | The legislation does not prevent nor prohibit transaction monitoring outside the jurisdiction.                                                                                                                                                    |

| A9. | Individuals: For face-to-face contact, the bank verifies identity via an official identification document with a photograph (passport, identity card, driving licence, etc.) and puts on record the individual's full name, date of birth, address and nationality. For non-face-to-face contact, the bank obtains a certified copy of an official identification document, as well as a confirmation of the domicile indicated, either through an exchange of correspondence or by any other appropriate method. Corporates: With a registered office in Switzerland the bank ascertains whether the firm's name is published in the official Swiss Commerce Gazette or listed on a public website for commercial register entries. Private directories / databases can also be used. Otherwise, identity must be established with an extract from the Commercial Register. Identity is verified with an extract from the Commercial Register or extracts from public websites for Commercial Register entries, or equivalent documents substantiating the existence of the legal entity or company (such as a Certificate of Incorporation). In addition, the identity of the individuals establishing the business relationship must also be checked and the bank must take note of and document the contracting partners' power of attorney arrangements. Further, the financial intermediary must acknowledge the provisions regulating the power to bind the legal entity, and verify the identity of the persons who enter into the business relationship on behalf of the legal entity. |

| A13. | In the case of higher risk, Swiss law requires financial intermediaries to define higher risk criteria and provides guidance and examples (domicile of the contracting party and beneficial owner, type of business, origin country of payment, volume of incoming funds, the complexity of the structures, notably in case of use of domicile companies and the absence of personal contact with the beneficial owner). PEPs and correspondent banking institutions are deemed higher risk relationships.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |

| A14. | Business relationships with PEPs are regarded as higher risk and local regulations/guidance requires that enquiries should be made to ascertain whether the contracting partner/beneficial owner is a PEP. For national PEPs as well as PEPs related to inter-governmental organisations or international sporting federations, financial intermediaries may require another risk criteria to be met for the PEP to be considered as a higher risk relationship. The means of investigation for such higher risk business includes obtaining information in written or oral form from the contracting partner or beneficial owner, visits to the places of business of the contracting partner and beneficial owner, consultation of publicly accessible sources and databases, and information from trustworthy individuals where necessary. |
| Q15. | What enhanced due diligence must be performed for correspondent banking relationships (cross-border banking and similar relationships)?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| A15. | For cross-border banking relationships with foreign banks, the following due diligence procedures are to be performed in addition to the standard clarifications for high risk relationships: ensuring that the foreign bank is prohibited from entering into business relationships with shell banks, clarifying the AML and CFT controls implemented by the foreign bank and examining whether the foreign bank is subject to an equivalent regulation and supervision in the anti-money laundering and counter financing of terrorism domain. Furthermore, a risk-based procedure has to be established concerning the processing of repeated wire transfer instructions which lack the required sender information.                                                                                                                       |

| A17. | For business relationships entered into through correspondence or via the internet, banks must verify the identity of the contracting partner by obtaining a certified copy of an official identification document as well as a confirmation of the domicile indicated, either through correspondence exchange or by any other appropriate method. Identification based on an official identification document at delivery or receipt of mail is also deemed as sufficient proof of identity, provided that personal delivery to the recipient is thus warranted. In addition, beneficial ownership according to Form A must invariably be provided by individuals entering into a business relationship with a bank through correspondence. For business relationships established by electronic means, the bank shall identify, mitigate and control the risk associated with the use of new technologies. The lack of personal contact with the contracting party and the beneficial owner is considered higher risk, according to the domain of activity of the bank. |

* GDP at purchaser's prices is the sum of gross value added by all resident producers in the economy plus any product taxes and minus any subsidies not included in the value of the products. It is calculated without making deductions for depreciation of fabricated assets or for depletion and degradation of natural resources. Data are in current U.S. dollars. Dollar figures for GDP are converted from domestic currencies using single year official exchange rates. For a few countries where the official exchange rate does not reflect the rate effectively applied to actual foreign exchange transactions, an alternative conversion factor is used.

Personality profile is defined as a collection of data that permits an assessment of essential characteristics of the personality of a natural person. The additional protections of sensitive personal data and personality profiles include additional requirements regarding consent of the data subject, requirements of declaration of the existence of data files, prohibition of disclosure without justification and duty to inform the data subject of the data collection. Furthermore, the disclosure is subject to fines. |

| Q31. | Is there case law, other constitutional law or any other laws or regulations that may impact upon the transfer of information to this jurisdiction?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| A31. | No, see A32 below. Furthermore, the Swiss Law has taken over large parts of the European Union ("EU") data protection law. Therefore, interpretation within the EU is interesting for the Swiss interpretation as well.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

| Q32. | Does this jurisdiction have bank secrecy laws or other obligations of confidentiality (other than those that may have been accepted expressly under contract e.g. in account opening documentation)? If so, what data is subject to regulation?       |
| A32. | Yes, Switzerland has bank secrecy laws (art. 47 Banking Act). All secrets that a representative of a bank (a person active for the bank including Board of Directors, Management Board, employees, auditors, liquidators) learns in his/her function. |

| Q1. | In what year did the relevant AML laws and regulations become effective?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| A1. | The Law on Preventing Money Laundering (Law No: 4208), enacted on 19 Nov 1996, is the primary AML law in Turkey. The AML legal framework established by this law has been updated and strengthened by the passing of the Prevention of Laundering the Proceeds of Crime (Law No: 5549) on 18 Oct 2006 and by subsequent amendments on 1 Apr 2008, 07 Jul 2011, 26 Sep 2011, 11 Oct 2011 and 18 Jun 2014. In addition, the government of Turkey enacted on 7 Feb 2013 and amended on 18 Jun 2014 the Law on the Prevention of the Financing of Terrorism (Law No: 6415) which further defines terrorist financing offenses and provides new powers to the authorities to take action against suspected terrorist financing. Overarching these laws are the provisions of the Turkish Criminal Code (Law No. 5237, 12 Oct 2004) and its subsequent amendments (Law No. 5377, 8 Jul 2005) and the Criminal Procedure Law (Law No. 5271, 12 Dec 2004) which also contains provisions in relation to the prosecution of financial crime. AML regulations have also been issued to supplement the provisions of these laws. The key regulations are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) Regulation on the Measures regarding Prevention of Laundering the Proceeds of Crime and Financing of Terrorism, published in the Official Gazette No. 26751 of 9 Jan 2008, amended on 26 Jun 2010 and 10 Jun 2014;</li> <li>b) Regulation on the Examination of Money Laundering Offence, published in the Official Gazette No. 26603 of 4 Aug 2007, amended on 5 Feb 2010 and 10 Jun 2014; and</li> <li>c) Program of Compliance with Obligations of Anti-Money Laundering and Combating Financing of Terrorism, published in the Official Gazette No. 26999 of 16 Sep 2008, amended on 2 Jan 2010 and 11 Jun 2014.</li> </ul> Mali Suclari Arastirma Kurulu ("MASAK"), the Turkish Financial Crimes Investigation Board has provided guidance on specific AML issues through the publishing of several Communiqués. These have included, amongst other things, guidance on suspicious transaction reporting and customer due diligence. |
| Q2. | If the AML laws and/or regulations became effective in the last 2 years, what were the requirements of the previous AML regime?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| A2. | While the previous AML requirement remains in force, the passing of the Prevention of the Financing of Terrorism law (Law No.6415) on 7 Feb 2013 adds an additional facet to the existing regime by establishing new definitions of terrorist financing and creating new asset freezing powers for the regulatory authorities.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |

| A6. | Article 19 of the "Regulation on Measures Regarding Prevention of Laundering Proceeds of Crime and Financing of Terrorism" provides that "The obliged parties shall be required to follow up permanently the transactions conducted by their customers whether they are in compliance with the information regarding the customer's profession, commercial activities, business history, financial status, risk profile and sources of funds within the scope of permanent business relationships and keep up-to-date information, documents and records regarding the customer. Furthermore, the accuracy of information regarding the telephone and fax number and e-mail address of customers received for customer identification shall be verified, if necessary, within the scope of risk-based approach using these means by contacting the relevant person. Financial institutions shall also take the necessary measures in order to follow up the transactions conducted out of permanent business relationship in the risk-based approach. Financial institutions shall establish, with this purpose, appropriate risk-management systems." Separately, the Ministry of Finance has the authority to determine obliged parties and specify the implementation of principles and procedures, including measures to assign an officer with necessary authority at an administrative level for ensuring compliance with this Law and to establish training, internal control and risk management systems regarding the size of business and business volumes.                                                                            |

| A11. | On behalf of real persons: National identification card, driving licence or passport of the person performing the transaction and the beneficiary and proxy document stamped by the public notary. Legal persons: Trade gazettes, signature circulars, list of authorised company representatives and their signature circulars of the beneficiary, national identification card, driving licence or passport of the person performing the transaction. If the person performing the transaction is not listed as an authorised company representative of the beneficiary, then a proxy document stamped by the public notary is required. The definition of beneficial owner was amended in Jun 2014. The amendment requires legal persons to take necessary measures to identify the beneficial owner of entities by checking the shareholding structure and company from the relevant trade registry. If there is any doubt about the identification of the beneficial owner, then the real persons who exercise control over the management of a legal entity are deemed to be the beneficial owner. Under the regulation, when establishing a permanent business relationship with legal persons registered within the trade registry, obliged parties should identify the natural person partners holding more than 25% of the legal person's shares as the beneficial owner. In cases where there is a suspicion that the natural person partner holding more than 25% of the legal person's shares is not the beneficial owner, or where there is no natural person holding a share at this rate, necessary measures should be taken in order to detect the natural person(s) who is/are ultimately controlling the legal person. Any natural person(s) detected shall be considered as beneficial owner. In cases where the beneficial owner is still not detected, the natural person(s) holding the position of senior managing official, whose authorisation to represent the legal person is/are registered to trade registry, shall be considered as beneficial owner.                                                                                                                                                                                                                |

| A13. | For complex and unusually high volume transactions, enhanced customer due diligence measures is required. There is a recommendation by MASAK stating that banks should utilise enhanced due diligence procedures for high-risk transactions. The risk is determined on the basis of various factors such as the background of the customer, country of residence, related bank accounts and commercial activities. Additional enhanced measures are included in relation to groups with high risk to be assessed in line with risk based approach.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

| A23. | Article 5 of Law 5549 states that: "In the scope of necessary measures, the Ministry of Finance has the authority to determine obliged parties and implementation principles and procedures, including measures to assign an officer with necessary authority at administrative level for ensuring compliance with this Law and to establish training, internal control and risk management systems by regarding size of business and business volumes." According to Masak General Communiqué 13, suspicious transaction reporting shall be done by filling in STR forms attached to the general or sector-specific suspicious transaction reporting guidelines prepared for the obliged parties. Electronic suspicious transaction reporting shall be done by using MASAK.ONLINE system. Obligated parties who are required to submit STRs electronically and the starting dates of the application shall be determined by MASAK. Guidelines to be published by MASAK shall include procedures and principles related to the accession to and the using of MASAK.ONLINE system by obliged parties. Obligated parties who are deemed appropriate by MASAK, other than those who are required, may also submit suspicious transaction reports electronically. Guidelines to be published by MASAK shall include information on the form, period and contents related to the application for submission of electronic STRs and on filling in STR forms using MASAK.ONLINE system by obliged parties willing to submit STRs electronically. Obligated parties allowed to submit STR forms electronically shall be required to report suspicious transactions through MASAK.ONLINE system as of the date of authorisation. They shall not submit STRs, any more, in paper form. |

| A25. | Article 4(2) of Law No.5549 prohibits institutions and individuals from disclosing to other parties that they have reported a suspicious transaction to MASAK in relation to one of their customers. Article 29 of the Regulation on Measures Regarding Prevention of Laundering Proceeds of Crime and Financing of Terrorism covers the persons and the institutions who report suspicious transactions as well as any members of the institution who carry out and manage the transaction, their legal representatives and any other personnel that knows that the suspicious transaction has been reported. This regulation prohibits disclosing the fact that a suspicious transaction has been reported to MASAK to parent companies, branches, agencies and affiliated businesses abroad. In addition, internal reports relating to the suspicious transaction may also not be disclosed to these parties. There is also a requirement that access to systems and other information should be restricted to ensure that information regarding suspicious transaction reports remains confidential. Masak General Communiqué No.13 sets forth that in order to categorize an international transaction as a suspicious transaction which may be monitored outside the jurisdiction, obliged parties should determine whether such transaction constitutes a part of customers' business transaction. While there is no specific prohibition, these requirements in combination with the restrictions around the transfer of customer information to other parties, make monitoring of transactions outside of the jurisdiction problematic. |

| Q26. | Is there a legal requirement for a bank's external auditor/other external organisation to report on the bank's AML systems and controls?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| A26. | Yes. The Banking Regulation and Supervisory Agency ("BRSA") requires banks to conduct an independent "Information Systems and Banking Processes Audit" on an annual basis. Although this is not specifically AML related it does include requirements to review the deposits process, new customer creation, customer data entry and change management and money transfer controls. |

| A27. | Audits are carried out on a yearly basis and the reports are submitted to BRSA with the release of financial statements.                                                                                                                                                                       |

| Q28. | What are the requirements for the content of this external report on a bank's AML systems and controls? Does it require: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) sample testing of KYC files?</li> <li>b) sample testing of SAR reports?</li> <li>c) examination of risk assessments?</li> </ul> |
| A28. | The information systems audit covers system and controls generally. While testing must be performed as part of this, there is no requirement for this to include AML processes specifically.                                                                                                              |

| A29. | Currently, there is no all-encompassing data protection law in Turkey and there is no specific definition of personal data or sensitive data. Likewise, there are no specific laws in relation to the protection of corporate data. A draft data protection law was submitted to Parliament for review on 24 Apr 2008. However, it has not yet received approval from the Turkish parliament. It is envisaged that the new law will govern the protection of personal data, the use of personal data, reliability for the accuracy of data, renewal and erasure requirements, information security and additional requirements about confidential personal data. In the absence of a specific data protection law, there is currently a fragmented set of laws that govern data privacy. The key applicable laws and articles are set out below: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) as per Article 20, titled Privacy of Private Life, of the Constitution of the Republic of Turkey; everyone has the right to demand respect for his/her private and family life;</li> <li>b) as per Article 73 of the Banking Law (No. 5411), staff of Banking Regulation and Supervision Agency and Savings Deposit Insurance Fund shall not disclose the confidential information that they acquire as part of their duties. Besides, those who, by virtue of their positions or in the course of performance of their duties, have access to confidential information about banks or clients are not permitted to disclose such confidential information to any person or entity other than the authorities expressly authorised by law;</li> <li>c) as per Articles 113 and 135 of the Capital Markets Law (No. 4902); the chairman and members of the Capital Markets Board as well as the staff shall not disclose the secrets they have learned during their services to anyone, except the persons authorised according to this Law and their special laws and they cannot use them for the benefit of themselves or others. Persons and institutions from which the Board has outsourced support services as well as their employees shall also be subject to this provision. This obligation shall also continue after retiring from office;</li> <li>d) as per Article 25 of the Civil Law (No. 4721); the person subject to assault on his/her personal rights may claim protection from the judge against the individuals who made the assault. Each assault against personal rights is considered contrary to the laws unless the assent of the person whose personal right is damaged is based on any one of the reasons related to private or public interest and use of authorisation conferred upon by the laws; and</li> <li>e) as per Article 136 of Turkish Criminal Law (No. 5237), any person who unlawfully delivers data to another person, or publishes or acquires the same through illegal means is punished with imprisonment from one year to four years.</li> </ul> |

| Q32. | Does this jurisdiction have bank secrecy laws or other obligations of confidentiality (other than those that may have been accepted expressly under contract e.g. in account opening documentation)? If so, what data is subject to regulation?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| A32. | Yes. The Banking Law and Criminal Code contain secrecy provisions which limit the transfer of information. A criminal offence is in place for banks and bank employees who breach customer confidentiality. All persons or legal entities to which a bank provides services can be regarded as bank customer according to the Article 76 of Banking Law. Accordingly, even customers who makes a one-off payment to the bank counter is regarded as a bank customer even though he/she does not have an account in related bank. It is an offense when the customer secrets are shared with unauthorised persons or used for responsible individual's own or other's benefit. A verbal transfer of customer secrets is also regarded as an offense. Occurrence of damage is not required. The offense cannot occur if a bank employee declares a customer secret negligently. For example, a bank employee may not be sentenced in cases where the transfer of information is unintentional, for example if conversations or documental evidence are heard or seen by third parties incidentally. Furthermore, the aggrieved party may file a suit for damages against the bank, since the bank is also liable as employer for the tortuous acts of its employees within the scope of Obligations Law Article 49, 66 and 116. In this case, the bank may recourse to the responsible employee which declared the customer secret. Law on Payment and Security Settlement Systems, Payment Services and Electronic Money Institutions numbered 6493 ("Law 6493") requires the system operator and payment service provider to use personal information by taking the necessary precautions for protecting personal data. However, according to the Article 90 of the Capital Markets Law numbered 6362, ("CML") the obliged parties shall not refrain from providing information by claiming the confidentiality and secrecy provisions related to existing in CML and special Laws. Recently, Prime Ministry Circular No. 2014/10 on Financial Access, Financial Education and Financial Consumer Protection Strategy and Action Plans which includes principles on protection of consumer data and privacy was adopted and published in the Official Gazette No. 29021 dated 05 Jun 2014. |

| A1. | A general legal obligation on the part of financial institutions in the UK to identify its customers was first introduced in 1994. The Money Laundering Regulations ("ML Regulations") came into force in the UK on 15 Dec 2007. The Money Laundering (Amendment) Regulations 2012 extended the scope of the Regulations to include all estate agents, included a power for professional supervisory bodies to share information with each other and particularised HMRC's criteria that may be used to determine whether an individual is "fit and proper" in connection with money service businesses and trust and company service providers.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Q2. | If the AML laws and/or regulations became effective in the last 2 years, what were the requirements of the previous AML regime?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |

| Q9.  | What are the high level requirements for verification of customer identification information (individuals and legal entities)?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| A9.  | Evidence of identity can be in documentary or electronic form. Individuals: full name, residential address and date of birth ideally from a government issued document which includes the customer's full name and photo, and either residential address or date of birth e.g. valid passport, valid photo card driving licence etc.; or a government issued document (without a photograph) which includes the customer's full name, supported by a second document, either government-issued, or issued by a judicial authority, a public sector body or authority, a regulated utility company, or another FCA-regulated firm in the UK financial services sector or in an equivalent jurisdiction, which includes the customer's full name and either residential address or date of birth. Corporates (other than regulated firms): full name, registration number, registered office in country of incorporation and business address. Additionally, for private / unlisted companies: names of all directors (or equivalent), names of individuals who own or control over 25% of its shares or voting rights and names of any individual(s) who otherwise exercise control over the management of the company. The firm should verify the existence of the corporate from either confirming the company's listing on a regulated market, conducting a search of the relevant company registry or obtaining a copy of the company's Certificate of Incorporation. For private / unlisted companies, the firm may decide, following a risk assessment, to verify one or more of the directors as appropriate in line with the CDD requirements for individuals. In respect of beneficial owners, the relevant person must take risk based and adequate measures to verify the identity of the beneficial owner(s). |
| Q10. | Where copies of identification documentation are provided, what are the requirements around independent verification or authentication?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| A10. | UK AML Guidance states that where identity is verified electronically, or copy documents are used, the firm should apply an additional verification check to manage the risk of impersonation fraud. For example, one of these checks may be to require copy documents to be certified by an appropriate person.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |

| A11. | The ML Regulations define beneficial owners as individuals either owning or controlling more than 25% of bodies corporate or partnerships (or at least 25% of trusts) or otherwise owning or controlling the customer. The JMLSG Guidance stipulates that the firm must know the names of all individual beneficial owners owning or controlling more than 25% of the company's shares or voting rights (even where these interests are held indirectly) or who otherwise exercise control over the management of the company. The firm must take risk based and adequate measures to verify the identity of those individuals.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |

| A29. | Yes. The processing or retaining of personal data in the UK is governed by the Data Protection Act 1998 (DPA): <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) the DPA regulates the processing of 'personal data'. The information obtained/retained by a relevant person for the purposes of customer due diligence would fall within the definition of personal data;</li> <li>b) the DPA only applies to individuals and not legal persons. It therefore does not extend protection to corporate data; and</li> <li>c) yes. Section 2 of the DPA provides a separate definition of "sensitive personal data" which relates to personal data consisting of information as to the racial or ethnic origin of the data subject, their political opinions, their religious beliefs or other beliefs of a similar nature, whether they are a member of a trade union, their physical or mental health or condition, their sexual life, their commission or alleged commission of any offence, or any proceedings for any offence committed or alleged to have been committed by them, the disposal of such proceedings or the sentence of any court in such proceedings.</li> </ul> In addition to meeting one of the conditions for processing in Schedule 2 of the DPA, at least one of several other conditions listed in Schedule 3 of the DPA must be met in the case of processing of sensitive personal data. Additional regulations such as the Data Protection (Processing of Sensitive Personal Data) Order 2000 and subsequent orders also provide that sensitive personal data can be processed where there is substantial public interest, such as the prevention or detection of crime, and protecting the public against malpractice or maladministration. For further information see 'The Guide to Data Protection' published by the Information Commissioner's Office: http://ico.org.uk/for_organisations/data_protection/~media/documents/library/Data_Protection/Practical_application/the_guide_to_data_protection.pdf  |

| Q32. | Does this jurisdiction have bank secrecy laws or other obligations of confidentiality (other than those that may have been accepted expressly under contract e.g. in account opening documentation)? If so, what data is subject to regulation?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| A32. | The UK does not have bank secrecy laws. The case of Tournier v National Provincial and Union Bank of England [1924] determined that it is an implied term of the contract between customers and a bank that the bank will keep the customers’ information confidential. The scope of confidentiality extends to all information held on a customer. However, a bank’s duty of confidentiality is not absolute. The case established the conditions under which banks owed confidentiality to their clients and circumstances allowing banks to legally disclose information about their customer. These principles include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) where the financial institution is compelled by law to disclose the information;</li> <li>b) if a financial institution has a public duty to disclose the information;</li> <li>c) if the financial institution’s own interests require disclosure; and</li> <li>d) Where the customer has consented, even implicitly, to disclosure.</li> </ul> |

| A6. | Yes. According to the Law of Ukraine on Prevention and Counteraction to Legalisation (Laundering) of the Proceeds of Crime or Terrorist Financing, the subject of primary financial monitoring shall proceed with the classification of its clients taking into account risk criteria. The risk criterion was approved by the Decree of State Committee for Financial Monitoring of Ukraine #126 on 03 Aug 2010. Starting from the effective date of the new edition of the law, all subjects of the law shall apply a risk based approach to identification of their clients and performing internal monitoring procedures. The risk criteria are still to be adopted. |

* GDP at purchaser's prices is the sum of gross value added by all resident producers in the economy plus any product taxes and minus any subsidies not included in the value of the products. It is calculated without making deductions for depreciation of fabricated assets or for depletion and degradation of natural resources. Data are in current U.S. dollars. Dollar figures for GDP are converted from domestic currencies using single year official exchange rates. For a few countries where the official exchange rate does not reflect the rate effectively applied to actual foreign exchange transactions, an alternative conversion factor is used.

| A6. | Yes, the CBB uses a risk based approach to customer due diligence and ongoing monitoring through its rulebooks. The CBB requires banks to have effective anti-money laundering policies and procedures in addition to measures for combating the financing of terrorism.                                                                                                                                                                                                               |

Equivalent measures must be taken for electronic copies. Identification documents which are not obtained by an authorised official of the licensee in original form must instead be certified by one of the following from a Gulf Cooperation Council ("GCC") or FATF member state: a lawyer; a notary; a chartered/certified accountant; an official of a government ministry; an official of an embassy or consulate; or an official of another licensed financial institution or of an associate company of the licensee. The individual making the certification under FC-1.2.5 must give clear contact details (e.g. by attaching a business card or company stamp). The bank must verify the identity of the person providing the certification through checking membership of a professional organisation (for lawyers or accountants), or through checking against databases/websites, or by direct phone or email contact. Non-financial institutions:Article 4 of Ministerial Order No.23 of 2002 details that before establishing any business relationship, registered persons shall establish the identities of their customers, representatives and beneficiaries from the transaction by using all the reasonable methods and adopt all the possible precautions to ascertain the validity of documents or details concerning their identities.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |

| A11. | Financial institutions: The Financial Crime module (FC – 1.1.5 to FC - 1.1.7 and FC - 1.6.1) of CBB Rulebook Volume 1 (http://cbb.complinet.com/cbb/display/display.html?rbid=1820&amp;element_id=5272) states that banks must obtain a signed statement from all new customers confirming whether or not the customer is acting on their own behalf. This undertaking must be obtained prior to conducting any transactions with the customer concerned. Where a customer is acting on behalf of a third party, the bank must also obtain a signed statement from the third party, confirming they have given authority to the customer to act on their behalf. Where the third party is a legal person, the bank must have sight of the original board resolution (or other applicable document) authorising the customer to act on the third party's behalf, and retain a certified copy. Banks must establish and verify the identity of the customer and (where applicable) the party/parties on whose behalf the customer is acting, including the beneficial owner of the funds. In the case of minors, banks must additionally verify the identity of the parent(s) or legal guardian(s). Where a third party on behalf of a person lacking full legal capacity wishes to open an account, the bank must establish the identity of that third party as well as the intended account holder. Financial services must not be provided to charitable funds and religious, sporting, social, cooperative and professional societies, until an original certificate authenticated by the relevant Ministry confirming the identities of those purporting to act on their behalf (and authorising them to obtain the said service) has been obtained. For clubs and societies registered with the General Organisation for Youth &amp; Sports (GOYS), banks must contact GOYS to clarify whether the account may be opened in accordance with the rules of GOYS. In addition, in the case of sports organisations registered with the Bahrain Olympic Committee (BOC), banks must contact BOC to clarify whether the account may be opened in accordance with the rules of BOC. Non-financial institutions: Ministerial Order No.7 of 2001 requires each institution to verify a customer's identity and his source of funds and obtain proof that: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>establishes the customer's identity;</li> <li>establishes that the source of funds is as claimed by the customer; and</li> <li>determines the customer's address, date of birth and nationality. If the customer is an agent of a business or firm subject to the supervision of a controlling authority and resides in a country that has similar laws for prohibition and combating money laundering, it may be sufficient evidence to receive written confirmation from the customer of the availability of proof of the principal's identity, its registration and maintenance thereof.</li> </ol> |

Banks must utilise publicly available databases and information to establish whether a customer is a PEP. Banks must establish a client acceptance policy with regard to PEPs, taking into account the reputational and other risks involved. Senior management approval must be obtained before a PEP is accepted as a customer. Where an existing customer is a PEP, or subsequently becomes a PEP, enhanced monitoring and customer due diligence measures must include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) analysis of complex financial structures, including trusts, foundations or international business corporations;</li> <li>b) a written record in the customer file to evidence that reasonable measures have been taken to establish both the source of wealth and the source of funds;</li> <li>c) development of a profile of anticipated customer activity, to be used in ongoing monitoring;</li> <li>d) approval of senior management for allowing the customer relationship to continue; and</li> <li>e) on-going account monitoring of the PEP's account by senior management such as the MLRO.</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |

| A15. | The Financial Crime module (FC – 1.8) of CBB Rulebook Volume 1 (http://cbb.complinet.com/cbb/display/display.html?rbid=1820&amp;element_id=5272) states that Banks must implement the following additional measures, prior to opening a correspondent banking relationship: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>complete a signed statement that outlines the respective responsibilities of each institution in relation to money laundering detection and monitoring responsibilities; and</li> <li>ensure that the correspondent banking relationship has the approval of senior management.</li> </ol> Banks which intend to act as correspondent banks must gather sufficient additional information (e.g. through a questionnaire) about their respondent banks to understand the nature of the respondent's business. Factors to consider include: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>information about the respondent bank's ownership, structure and management;</li> <li>major business activities of the respondent and its location (i.e. whether it is located in a FATF compliant jurisdiction) as well as the location of its parent (where applicable);</li> <li>where the customers of the respondent bank are located;</li> <li>the respondent's AML and CFT controls;</li> <li>the purpose for which the account will be opened;</li> <li>confirmation that the respondent bank has verified the identity of any third party entities that will have direct access to the correspondent banking services without reference to the respondent bank; (e.g. in the case of 'payable through accounts')</li> <li>the extent to which the respondent bank performs on-going due diligence on customers with direct access to the account, and the condition of bank regulation and supervision in the respondent's country (e.g. from published FATF reports). Banks should take into account the country where the respondent bank is located and whether that country abides by the FATF 40+ 9 recommendations when establishing correspondent relationships with foreign banks. Banks should obtain where possible copies of the relevant laws and regulations concerning AML/CFT and satisfy themselves that respondent banks have effective customer due diligence measures consistent with the FATF 40+ 9 recommendations;</li> <li>confirmation that the respondent bank is able to provide relevant customer identification data on request to the correspondent bank; and</li> <li>whether the respondent bank has been subject to a money laundering or terrorist financing investigation.</li> </ol> |

In particular, banks must take measures to ensure that the customer is the person they claim to be and that the address provided is genuinely that of the customer. There are multiple checks that can provide a bank with a reasonable degree of assurance as to the authenticity of the applicant: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>telephone contact with the applicant on an independently verified home or business number;</li> <li>with the customer's consent, contacting an employer to confirm employment, via phone through a listed number or in writing; and</li> <li>salary details appearing on recent bank statements.</li> </ol>                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |

| Q23. | Are there any requirements (legal or regulatory) to use automated Suspicious Transaction monitoring technology?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| A23. | The Financial Crime module (FC – 2.1 and FC – 2.2) of CBB Rulebook Volume 1 (http://cbb.complinet.com/cbb/display/display.html?rbid=1820&amp;element_id=5272) specifies that banks must take reasonable care to establish and maintain appropriate systems and controls to limit their vulnerability to financial crime. These systems and controls must be documented, approved and reviewed annually by the Board of the bank. The documentation and the Board's review and approval, must be made available upon request to the CBB. Banks must develop risk-based monitoring systems appropriate to the complexity of their business, their number of clients and types of transactions. These systems must be configured to identify significant or abnormal transactions or patterns of activity. Such systems must include limits on the number, types or size of transactions undertaken outside expected norms; and must include limits for cash and non-cash transactions. The banks' risk-based monitoring systems should therefore be configured to help identify: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) transactions which do not appear to have a clear purpose or which make no obvious economic sense;</li> <li>b) significant or large transactions not consistent with the normal or expected behaviour of a customer; and</li> <li>c) unusual patterns of activity (relative to other customers of the same profile or of similar types of transactions, for instance because of differences in terms of volumes, transaction type, or flows to or from certain countries), or activity outside the expected or regular pattern of a customer's account activity.</li> </ul> Banks must consider the need to include automated transaction monitoring as part of their risk-based monitoring systems to spot abnormal or unusual flows of funds. In the absence of automated transaction monitoring systems, all transactions above BHD6,000 (approx. USD15,980) must be viewed as significant and be captured in a daily transactions report for monitoring by the MLRO or a relevant delegated official, and records to be retained by the bank for five years after the date of the transaction. CBB would expect larger banks to include automated transaction monitoring as part of their risk-based monitoring system. |
| Q24. | Is there a requirement to obtain authority to proceed with a current/ongoing transaction that is identified as suspicious?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |

| Q1. | In what year did the relevant AML laws and regulations become effective?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| A1. | Iraqi AML law became effective in 2004.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Q2. | If the AML laws and/or regulations became effective in the last 2 years, what were the requirements of the previous AML regime?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| A2. | N/A                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Q3. | Who is the regulator for AML controls for: (a) Banking; (b) Other financial Services; (c) Non financial sector (e.g. casinos, high value goods etc.). Please include link to the regulator(s) website.                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| A3. | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) Central Bank of Iraq ("CBI") http://www.cbi.iq;</li> <li>b) N/A; and</li> <li>c) real estate agents, accountants, lawyers, notaries and trust and company service providers are not subject to the AML law. While the AML Law applies to dealers in precious metals, stones and jewels, no supervision of this sector exists.</li> </ul> |
| Q4. | Is there any practical guidance provided to firms by public authorities regarding AML requirements, beyond the FATF recommendations and local legislation? Please include link to website, where available.                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| A4. | N/A                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Q5. | Is there a requirement to retrospectively verify the identity of customers before the date the new AML regime was introduced?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| A5. | Article 15(5) of the AML Law requires financial institutions to apply CDD/KYC measures to accounts which existed prior to effectiveness of the AML Law, "unless the financial institution reasonably believes that it knows the true identity of the customer." This provision allows application of a risk based approach to accounts which existed prior to enactment of the AML Law.                            |
| Q6. | Is a risk based approach approved by the local regulator(s)?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| A6. | Article 15 of the AML Law permits a financial institution to determine the extent of due diligence obtained on a risk sensitive basis depending on the type of customer, business relationship or transaction.                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

| A11. | Article 17 of the AML Law obligates financial institutions to "undertake such verification as is necessary in order to form a reasonable belief that it knows the true identity of the customer and/or any beneficial owner of the funds." It further requires financial institutions to have procedures in place "including escalation protocols" to resolve discrepancies and decline or cease to do business with a customer when it cannot form a reasonable belief that it knows the true identity of the customer and/or beneficial owner of the funds. There is, however, no requirement that financial institutions understand the ownership or control structure of the customer or determine who are the natural persons that ultimately own, control or exercise ultimate effective control over the legal person or arrangement or control the customer. Financial institutions should require from customers a statement of ownership when it is clear the client is not the beneficial owner.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |

| A21. | The obligation to report suspicious transactions only applies to transactions above IQD4m (approx. USD3,610). Article 19 of the AML Law provides that where a financial institution has reason to know that a suspicious transaction has occurred, whether effected by a customer or other person, where the total value of the transaction or series of potentially related transactions is equal to or greater than IQD4m (approx. USD3,610) the financial institution must notify the MLRO. However, in the case of suspected structuring transactions for the purpose of circumventing reporting requirements, a financial institution should report such transactions irrespective of the amount. |

| Q20. | Are there any obligations to report anything more than suspicious transactions e.g. unusual transactions, cash transactions above a certain threshold, international wire transfers, other transactions etc.? |
| A20. | Obligated entities are required to report unusual activity reports and currency transactions reports (of specified thresholds; e.g. cash transactions above NIS50,000 (approx. USD13,000)).                   |
| Q21. | Are there any de-minimis thresholds below which transactions do not need to be reported?                                                                                                                      |
| A21. | Generally, transactions under NIS50,000 (approx. USD13,000) do not need to be reported (with the exception of high-risk countries, which require a report from a sum of NIS 5,000 (approx. USD1,300)).        |
| Q22. | Are there any penalties for non compliance with reporting requirements e.g. tipping off?                                                                                                                      |
| A22. | Yes, the regulators can sanction the supervised institutions. The maximum fine that supervised institutions can face is NIS2.26m (approx. USD580,000) for each violation.                                     |
| Q23. | Are there any requirements (legal or regulatory) to use automated Suspicious Transaction monitoring technology?                                                                                               |
| A23. | No, although several institutions use automated suspicious transaction monitoring technology.                                                                                                                 |
| Q24. | Is there a requirement to obtain authority to proceed with a current/ongoing transaction that is identified as suspicious?                                                                                    |
| A24. | The obligation is to report the transaction to the FIU, there is no requirement to obtain the authority to proceed (with the exemption of TF suspected transactions).                                         |

| Q9.  | What are the high level requirements for verification of customer identification information (individuals and legal entities)?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| A9.  | Banking Natural Persons: Identification data shall include the full name of the customer, nationality, permanent address, phone number, work address, type of activity, purpose of business relationship and its intended nature, names and nationalities of persons authorised to manage the account and any other information the bank deems necessary. With regard to legally unqualified persons, such as minors, documents of their legal representatives who manage such accounts shall be obtained and in case a person deals with the bank on behalf of the customer, a notarised power of attorney or a bank authorisation shall be obtained and kept in addition to verifying the identity of the proxy. Legal persons: Identification data shall include the name of the legal person, legal status, name of owners and their shares, the authorised signatories, domicile of the legal person, line of business, capital, registration date and number, tax number, national identity number of the organisation, names and nationalities of signatories authorised to run the account, phone numbers, purpose of the business relationship and its nature so the bank is aware of the ownership structure and the provisions governing the powers to take binding decisions for the legal person and any other information the bank deems necessary. The bank should obtain the required documents indicating an authorisation by the legal person to natural persons to run the account as well as identifying the authorised persons. Public shareholding companies are excluded for the request for names of owners and their shares; instead it is adequate to obtain a list of shareholders whose shares exceed 10% of the capital. Insurance Natural persons: Identification data shall include the full name of the customer, nationality, date and place of birth, national number for Jordanian nationals and the passport number for non-nationals, current permanent residential address, purpose of the business relationship and its nature and any other information the company considers necessary. Regarding persons without mental capacity, the company shall have the documents relating to them and to the persons who represent them legally, as the case may be. Legal persons: Identity data shall include the name of the legal person, legal status, location address, type of activity, capital, date and number of registration with the competent entities including tax number, phone numbers, purpose of the business relationship and its nature, names and addresses of owners and their shares, the authorised signatories, binding authority of the legal person or legal arrangement so that the company is aware of the ownership structure and the provisions governing the powers to take binding decisions for the legal person and any other information the company deems necessary. Companies should obtain the required documents indicating an authorisation by the legal person to the natural persons to represent it, the nature of their relation with the legal person, and identify their identity and their activities according to the procedures of identifying the identity and the activities of the customer. The company shall be sure that there is no legal bar that prevents transacting with them and obtain their signatures. For other industries please refer to the attached documents at the following link: http://www.amlu.gov.jo/ar-jo/legislation/instructionsguidelinesforantimoneylaunderin.aspx |

* GDP at purchaser's prices is the sum of gross value added by all resident producers in the economy plus any product taxes and minus any subsidies not included in the value of the products. It is calculated without making deductions for depreciation of fabricated assets or for depletion and degradation of natural resources. Data are in current U.S. dollars. Dollar figures for GDP are converted from domestic currencies using single year official exchange rates. For a few countries where the official exchange rate does not reflect the rate effectively applied to actual foreign exchange transactions, an alternative conversion factor is used.

| Q29. | Does the country have established data protection laws? If so:a) does the definition of "personal data" cover material likely to be held for KYC purposes?b) how do the laws apply to corporate data?c) does this country have a separate definition of "sensitive data"? How is it defined and what are the additional protections?   |
| A29. | Jordan has no Data Protection Laws, however the Jordanian Constitution specifically recognises a limited right to privacy but these rights must be circumscribed by laws to be claimable. Furthermore, there are a number of laws which already provide some level of privacy protection such as the Law of Securing Information Obtaining Rights. |
| Q30. | Are there any prohibitions on the transfer of credit reports (for KYC and credit risk analysis purposes), criminal records (for KYC and crime prevention purposes) and medical data (for KYC and pension benefits purposes)?                                                                                                                       |

| A1. | Law #106/2013 came into effect in May 2013, replacing law #35/2002.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Q2. | If the AML laws and/or regulations became effective in the last 2 years, what were the requirements of the previous AML regime?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| A2. | Prior to law #106/2013, law #35/2002 was in effect, which did not cover international treaties in relation to terrorist financing. The update to the law reflects the recent developments in AML across the world.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Q3. | Who is the regulator for AML controls for: (a) Banking; (b) Other financial Services; (c) Non financial sector (e.g. casinos, high value goods etc.). Please include link to the regulator(s) website.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| A3. | a) law #24/2012 relates to the establishment of Anti-Corruption Authority that looks after all the AML related activities for Kuwait as a whole. | Q24. | Is there a requirement to obtain authority to proceed with a current/ongoing transaction that is identified as suspicious?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| A24. | Banks should inform the SIC of suspicious transactions and are permitted to process the transactions unless objected to by the SIC. In addition, Banks are not allowed to close suspicious clients' accounts before consulting with the SIC. It should be noted that in case the client account was frozen at the request of the SIC, banks are not allowed to process any transaction for the client. |

|-------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Q25. | Does the local legislation allow transactions to be monitored outside the jurisdiction? |
| A25. | The law is silent in that regard.                                                       |

|-------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Q26. | Is there a legal requirement for a bank's external auditor/other external organisation to report on the bank's AML systems and controls?                                               |
| A26. | As stipulated by the Central Bank of Lebanon Basic Circular no. 83, external auditors are required to assess the Bank's AML function and issue a "gap analysis" report in that regard. |

|             |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
|-------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Q27. | If an external report on the bank's AML systems and controls is required: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) how frequently must the report be provided?</li> <li>b) to whom should the report be submitted?</li> <li>c) is it part of the financial statement audit?</li> </ul> |
| A27. | External auditors are required to report on yearly basis. The report should be addressed to the following parties: The Governor of the Central Bank, the SIC and the Management of the Bank.                                                                                                   |

| A29. | Yes, in Lebanon we operate under the Banking Secrecy Law. Accordingly any information pertaining to any depositor cannot be revealed to any party except the SIC, or if the client is subject to a court case. As for clients who have facilities with banks, their information can be shared between banks and this is done to help banks better assess the credit risk of facilities provided or to be provided.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |

| A32. | Yes. The Banking Secrecy Law was promulgated on 03 Sept 1956. Article 2 provides that managers and employees of banking establishments are bound to absolute secrecy in favour of the bank's clients and may not disclose to anyone, whether a private individual or an administrative, military or judicial authority, the names of clients, their assets and facts concerning them. Banks are authorised to open code number deposit accounts for their clients. The following exceptions apply: Banking secrecy terminates in the case of bankruptcy or in the case of debtor accounts, SIC is exempt so as to provide for the lifting of confidentiality in favour of competent judicial authorities where it has reason to suspect suspicious activity and additionally, records are required to be kept by financial institutions of cash transactions that exceed USD10,000 which are not subject to the Bank Secrecy Law. |

* GDP at purchaser's prices is the sum of gross value added by all resident producers in the economy plus any product taxes and minus any subsidies not included in the value of the products. It is calculated without making deductions for depreciation of fabricated assets or for depletion and degradation of natural resources. Data are in current U.S. dollars. Dollar figures for GDP are converted from domestic currencies using single year official exchange rates. For a few countries where the official exchange rate does not reflect the rate effectively applied to actual foreign exchange transactions, an alternative conversion factor is used.

| Q29. | Does the country have established data protection laws? If so: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) does the definition of "personal data" cover material likely to be held for KYC purposes?</li> <li>b) how do the laws apply to corporate data?</li> <li>c) does this country have a separate definition of "sensitive data"? How is it defined and what are the additional protections?</li> </ul>                                                                                                                                                                      |
| A29. | There is an Electronic Transactions Law issued under Royal Decree No. (69/2008). There is no clear definition of "personal" or "sensitive" data. The law generally regulates electronic transactions between parties. Article 45 of the Electronic Transactions Law sets out a general guideline on the protection of personal data. Additionally, Article 70 of banking law issued by CBO discusses certain aspects of confidentiality required by banks in respect of the information gathered during KYC ( http://www.cbo-oman.org/ ). |
| Q30. | Are there any prohibitions on the transfer of credit reports (for KYC and credit risk analysis purposes), criminal records (for KYC and crime prevention purposes) and medical data (for KYC and pension benefits purposes)?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

* GDP at purchaser's prices is the sum of gross value added by all resident producers in the economy plus any product taxes and minus any subsidies not included in the value of the products. It is calculated without making deductions for depreciation of fabricated assets or for depletion and degradation of natural resources. Data are in current U.S. dollars. Dollar figures for GDP are converted from domestic currencies using single year official exchange rates. For a few countries where the official exchange rate does not reflect the rate effectively applied to actual foreign exchange transactions, an alternative conversion factor is used.

| A24. | The Financial Information Unit Guide to Money Laundering and Terrorist Financing Suspicious Transaction Reporting (http://www.qfcra.com/en-us/legislation/Guides/FIU%20STR%20Guide.pdf) states the following under the section entitled Impact on Reported Transactions: "The law does not stipulate any provisions requiring Reporting Entities who have filed an STR to end or terminate their financial relationships with the reported entity or person. Reporting Entities should be aware that the decision to continue the business relationship after filing a STR should be based on commercial or risk containment reasons. However, a decision to terminate the business relationship must also ensure that the customer is not alerted to the filing of the STR which would constitute the offence of tipping off under Article (39) AML/CFT Law. It is recommended that in circumstances where Reporting Entities decide to terminate a business relationship, the Reporting Entity liaise directly with the FIU to ensure the termination does not tip off the entity or person or prejudice an investigation in any way. However, it is preferable that the Reporting Entity acts in coordination with the FIU, upon deciding to terminate its relationship with the suspected entity or person." Article 5.1.9 of Anti-Money Laundering and Combating Terrorist Financing (General Insurance) Rules 2012 (AMLG) issued by the Qatar Financial Centre Regulatory Authority Anti-Money Laundering and Combating Terrorist Financing Rules 2010 issued by the Qatar Financial Centre Regulatory Authority and the Anti-Money Laundering and Combating Terrorist Financing Rules 2010 issued by the Qatar Financial Markets Regulatory Authority rules all state that regulated entities can terminate relationships with customers for which they have issued SARs, however, regulated entities must ensure that restricting or terminating the business relationship does not inadvertently result in tipping off the customer. |

| A30. | We understand that there are restrictions on the transfer of the above mentioned information. Article 7 (1) of the Qatar Financial Centre Data Protection Regulations 2005 states that "a Data Controller may only Process Personal Data if: (1) the Data Subject has unambiguously given his consent." The definition in Article 26 of processing data in the aforementioned regulations is "any operation or set of operations which is performed upon Personal Data, whether or not by automatic means, such as collection, recording, organisation, storage, adaptation or alteration, retrieval, consultation, use, disclosure by transmission, dissemination or otherwise making available, alignment or combination, blocking, erasure or destruction." Additionally, our understanding of Law Number 13 of 2012 (the Qatar Central Bank Law), based on the publications issued by lawyers reviewing the Arabic text of the Law, is that customer data cannot be transferred, except with the consent of the customer. Article 37 of the Qatari Constitution (quoted above) indicates that it is imperative that the confidentiality of private information is maintained. |

| A1. | With effect from 2000, the Central Bank of UAE ("CBUAE") issued the initial AML regulations under Circular 24/2000 ("the CB Regulations"). In addition, the Dubai Financial Services Authority ("DFSA") AML Module became effective from 2004 onwards. In Jul 2013, the DFSA AML Module was revised to the Anti-Money Laundering, Counter Terrorist Financing and Sanctions Module ("the DFSA AML Rules") while the UAE Securities and Commodities Authority ("SCA") issued its Anti-Money Laundering and Terrorism Finance Combating Procedures in Mar 2010 ("the SCA Regulations").                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |

| A6. | The CB Regulations do not appear to apply a risk based approach to the application of the preventive measures, and no sectors have been specifically exempted from the provisions under the AML/CFT legislation and regulations. In addition, the CB Regulations have not been structured so as to recognise the possibility of a risk-based approach to the implementation of the preventive measures at an institutional level. This is in contrast to the approach adopted by the DFSA, which applies an overriding principle that institutions should have systems and controls that recognise and mitigate their specific risks. The DFSA AML Rules place greater emphasis on firms adopting a Risk Based Approach ("RBA") to AML compliance. Firms now have to undertake a risk assessment of its business and of every customer, and assign a risk rating proportionate to the money laundering risk, which will dictate the extent of Customer Due Diligence ("CDD") required. Where the risk of money laundering is high, firms are required to conduct Enhanced CDD. Alternatively, where the money laundering risks are deemed low, firms are permitted to adopt Simplified CDD measures. The SCA outlines a risk based approach by stating that customers should be classified in various categories according to the rates of potential risks they might pose. |

| A9.  | With respect to the CB Regulations: Individuals: The standard customer identification information specified in the regulations includes the name, address and place of work. In the case of natural persons, institutions are required to check the applicant's passport and retain a copy, which must be annotated by the account officer as a true copy. Passports are considered a universal and reliable form of verification in the UAE. Corporates: The regulations specify that the institution must take the name and address of the entity and, in the case of a partnership, must record similar information for each of the partners. In addition, it must "obtain all information and documents with regard to juridical persons", but specifies, in particular, the government-issued trade licence required by all businesses registered in the UAE. Institutions have typically interpreted "all documents" to mean the Memorandum and Articles of Association (or equivalent) and any documents that support the legal status of the company to conduct business in the jurisdiction. The DFSA AML Rules require all entities to establish and verify the identity of the customers and any beneficial owners on the basis of original or properly certified documents, data or information issued by or obtained from a reliable and independent source. In addition to the above requirements for individuals and corporate, the DFSA AML Rules require all entities to understand the customer's source of wealth or income and undertake on-going due diligence of the customer business relationship. The SCA Regulations outline the verification and identification requirements for both natural and nominal persons in Article 3. These requirements are similar to the requirements outlined for individuals and corporates in the CB Regulations. |
| Q10. | Where copies of identification documentation are provided, what are the requirements around independent verification or authentication?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| A10. | For individuals, a copy of the passport is required. For corporates, a copy of the trade licence, stamped and initialled by the concerned employee as "a true copy of the original" is required. There is no information in the regulations or guidance issued by the CBUAE or the SCA as to whether copies can or must be certified by external third parties such as notaries, lawyers and accountants. However, the DFSA AML Rules provide guidance for the identification documents to be certified as a true copy by the specified authorities such as registered lawyer, notary, chartered accountant, government ministry, post office, police officer, embassy or consulate.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |

| A11. | The Addendum states that, when opening accounts or remitting money, banks or financial institutions must obtain satisfactory evidence of the identities of the beneficial owners of companies and businesses and clearly understand the ownership and control structure of all legal entities. In addition to the above, the CB Regulations state that, when opening an account for a public shareholding company, a bank must obtain the name and address of the shareholders with holdings of 5% or more. The DFSA AML Rules require establishing and verifying the identity of the beneficial owners and obtaining sufficient and satisfactory evidence of their identities, which includes verifying information on the source of funds and wealth. In addition, the enhanced CDD measures requires the firm to update more regularly the customer CDD information which it holds on the customer and any beneficial owners, increase the degree and nature of monitoring of the business relationship in order to determine whether the customer's transactions or activities appear unusual or suspicious and obtain the approval of the senior management to commence a business relationship with a customer. However, in certain cases, the DFSA AML Rules permit a firm to decide not to verify the beneficial owners and apply simplified CDD measures. The SCA Regulations require verifying the "real beneficiary" of nominal persons (i.e. corporates), where a real beneficiary is defined as a natural person who has and practices actual control over the customer or the legal person, or over the legal arrangements.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |

| A13. | The Addendum states that enhanced due diligence processes should be applied with respect to high risk customers which includes foreign PEPs, correspondent banks and specific businesses and individuals dealing in precious metals and stones, real estate, luxury goods, auction houses, private banking customers and non-resident account holders. In addition, the indicators provided in Articles 8 to 14 of the regulations make reference to certain high risk scenarios (e.g. customers from drug producing countries or from countries that do not adequately apply the FATF standards), that should be considered as heightening the money laundering risk. The DFSA AML Rules require enhanced CDD measures in respect of any customer the firm has assigned a rating of “high risk”. Examples of such customers include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) business relationships conducted in unusual circumstances;</li> <li>b) legal persons or arrangements that are personal investment vehicles;</li> <li>c) companies that have nominee shareholders or directors or shares in bearer form;</li> <li>d) businesses that are cash-intensive;</li> <li>e) the ownership structure of the legal person that appears unusual or excessively complex given the nature of the legal person's business or activities;</li> <li>f) countries identified by credible sources, such as mutual evaluation or detailed assessment reports or published follow-up reports, as not having adequate AML systems;</li> <li>g) countries subject to sanctions, embargos or similar measures issued by, for example, the United Nations Security Council or identified by credible sources as having significant levels of corruption or other criminal activity;</li> <li>h) countries or geographic areas identified by credible sources as providing funding or support for terrorist activities, or that have designated terrorist organisations operating within their country;</li> <li>i) a person not meeting the definition of a PEP but whose high profile or influence poses an elevated risk of corruption;</li> <li>j) anonymous transactions (which may include cash); and</li> <li>k) non-face-to-face business relationships or transactions.</li> </ul> The SCA Regulations require companies to take preventative and precautionary measures for high risk customers by performing repeated, periodical and careful examination of the latest positions and transactions of the customer. |

| A17. | Article 3.1 of the CB Regulations requires institutions to take possession of the passport at the time of opening an account. This is understood by institutions (and reinforced by the UAE Central Bank) to mean that the process must be completed in the presence of the customer and that non-face-to-face account opening is not permitted in any circumstances. Similarly, the SCA Regulations require companies to review the original passport of the customer at the time of opening an account. Investors in securities can place their orders through a broker by telephone or in person, but the majority of orders are currently placed by telephone. Trading on the Dubai Financial Market ("DFM") and Abu Dhabi Securities Market ("ADSM") occurs on an electronic trading system, which automatically lists, matches, and executes trades. Securities brokers in the UAE provide investors with direct access to several trading platforms. There are no specific requirements in the DFSA AML Rules that seek to address the risks posed in this area. However, the guidance to the DFSA AML Rules specifies non face-to-face transactions and/or relationships as "high risk". For such business relationships, firms should adopt the enhanced CDD measures to AML compliance. |

| Q22. | Are there any penalties for non-compliance with reporting requirements e.g. tipping off?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| A22. | Yes, Article 15 of UAE Federal Law No 4 of 2002 sets out the penalties for failure to report any act related to a Money Laundering offence (imprisonment and/or a fine ranging from AED10,000 (approx. USD2,720) to AED100,000 (approx. USD27,230)). In addition, Article 16 sets out the penalties for tipping off any person subject to investigation (imprisonment for a maximum of one year and/or a fine ranging from AED5,000 (approx. USD1,360) to AED50,000 (approx. USD13,600)). |
| Q23. | Are there any requirements (legal or regulatory) to use automated Suspicious Transaction monitoring technology?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| A23. | There is no such mandatory requirement for use of automated monitoring technology.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Q24. | Is there a requirement to obtain authority to proceed with a current/ongoing transaction that is identified as suspicious?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| A24. | In case a transaction is identified as suspicious, the AMLSCU of the CBUAE shall give instructions to the institutions on how to proceed with the transaction. If the customer in question expresses his wish to proceed with the transaction before the institution receives the instruction from the AMLSCU, the institution shall immediately contact the AMLSCU for further instructions.                                                                                             |
| Q25. | Does the local legislation allow transactions to be monitored outside the jurisdiction?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| A25. | There is no specific guidance on monitoring transactions outside UAE. However, Article 21 and 22 of Federal Law No 4 of 2002 issued by the CBUAE permits cooperation with countries with which the UAE has a ratified treaty.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |

| Q26. | Is there a legal requirement for a bank's external auditor/other external organisation to report on the bank's AML systems and controls?                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| A26. | There is no specific legal requirement for an external auditor to provide a report on the bank's AML systems and controls. However, the DFSA AML Rules require a firm to undertake regular reviews and assessment of the effectiveness of its money laundering policies, procedures, systems and controls including compliance with its obligations under the DFSA AML Rules. The review and assessment may be undertaken by the firm's internal audit function or by a competent firm of independent auditors or compliance professionals. Similarly, the SCA Regulations stipulate that companies must conduct independent audits on at least an annual basis to measure the effectiveness of their policies and procedures. |

| A29. | The UAE does not have specific federal laws on data privacy, but various pieces of legislation may have an impact on businesses that engage in data processing activities. These include Federal Law No. 9 of 1987 as amended (Penal Code) which is the primary source of criminal law in the UAE. Specifically, Articles 378 and 379 set out statutory offences and punishment for publication of private matters or the unauthorised disclosure of private information. However, data privacy provisions do exist in the DIFC under the Data Protection Law 2007, as amended by the Data Protection Amendment Law 2012 ("the Law") <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) to the extent that "personal data" is defined essentially as "any data referring to an identifiable natural person", this is likely to cover material held for KYC purposes;</li> <li>b) the Law does not apply to corporate data;</li> <li>c) yes. Sensitive personal data is defined in the Law as personal data revealing or concerning (directly or indirectly) racial or ethnic origin, communal origin, political affiliations or opinions, religious or philosophical beliefs, criminal record, trade union membership and health or sex life. The additional protections are captured under Article 10 of the Law with respect to "processing of sensitive personal data."</li> </ul> https://www.difc.ae/sites/default/files/Data%20Protection%20Law%20Amendment%20Law_DIFC%20Law%20No.%205%20of%202012%20mark%20up_enacted_16%20Dec%202012.-v3doc_0.pdf |

| A29. | There are no special or separate legislative documents in Palestine that deal specifically with data privacy. However, there are several different laws and regulations that contain restrictions on the disclosure of certain confidential information. The main law in relation to confidential information is the Penal Law No. 16 of 1960 (the Penal Law), which criminalises the disclosure of confidential information. In particular, Article 355 of the Penal Law states that any person who discloses any official confidential information to any unauthorised person (or to any person who is not legally competent to receive such information) may be imprisoned for up to three years. Moreover, the third paragraph of the same Article provides for a similar punishment in respect of any person who receives confidential information in the context of his or her profession and reveals such information without legitimate cause. The provisions of the Penal Law are of general application, but there are also certain specific sectorial laws that place high emphasis on confidentiality and a duty to protect privileged information in different circumstances. These include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>a) Law No. 3 of 1999 regarding the Palestinian Bar Association, which stipulates in Article 28 that any lawyer is under a strict obligation not to disclose any secret information that he has received from his client or obtains in the context of his profession;</li> <li>b) similar provisions to those imposed on lawyers noted above can be found under laws regulating doctors and medical professionals (e.g. pharmacists) as well as financial auditors;</li> <li>c) laws and regulations that govern the functions and duties of financial brokers and custodians (in particular, Securities Law No. 12 of 2004) impose duties on officers of the stock market and brokerage firms to keep confidential any information they receive; and</li> <li>d) Banking Law No. 2 of 2002 (as amended) and the newly enacted Banking Law of 2012 provide that all board members and executive officers of any bank are, jointly and severally, liable in exercising their duty to maintain the secrecy of information regarding the clients of the bank.</li> </ul> |
